

Get a grip before it's too late by Gary Bate

The most difficult thing I find in writing my short articles is knowing where to start – after that it usually just pours out of me. There you go I've started...

I talk a lot about the subject that very few like to touch – death. I don't see it as being separate from life. To me, there's really no death; just a transition from one form to another and we are the one's who make the transition (just like a revolving door).

When I was a young boy, I asked the darkness 'what am I' and the meaning of this life. It seems like I have been on a journey ever since. I often wake with a compilation of thoughts and know to write.

I know that my Spirit is not an emotional beast and has no interest in Human drama. I also know that my Soul gives my body the breathe of life and my Spirit put it there. Clearly it doesn't always stay there and Spirit determines that too.

Your Spirit is vitally important to you and it surrounds you all of the time. Does it protect you? Yes, but it doesn't necessarily protect your body; it protects what you know. Christos means to know.

I write because everyone deserves a chance – a chance at life – a chance to know more...

The politicians will never sort the outside World because chaos is profitable to those in control. So it is a grave error to focus your thoughts outside of you. They give on one hand and take from the other. To them, resources are more important than life. To me, everyone is important.

So where does the line divide? The desire to know or not. Everyone has that choice. Death is a failure to know and Christos means to know. Be wise and open yourself up to know.

“O my beloved God, this day and every day hence forth, open me up to know; that I may beat the drums of my Spirit and not my emotional body. I conquer the past that I was. I am born a new.

From the Lord God of my being, I declare that I have outgrown my Light body and it is now redundant to me. From hence forth I execute my thoughts from the dictates of my UV blue body.”

What is the chance for everyone? What is the opportunity for everyone? Is it not simply a choice for everyone to want to know? Is it not a choice to set aside your emotions and your attitudes to allow a greater authority to reach you because you have made that step to reach it? Everyone can do that.

A New Year creeps upon us and as all times exist now, we have the opportunity to remember the future! Are we looking at ourselves in the Light right now? Perhaps we're having a Light review right now? What do we want to tell ourselves? That that will be the last Light review?

Globally, we have the opportunity to rehabilitate the species. All it takes is knowledge and every individual's willingness to receive it. Maybe it's time to blow the Pearly Gates off their hinges!

The great master said, “ let Caesar have what is Caesars” (Let the aristocratic families keep the World). We have more important things to do, like coming into alignment with our Spirit & Soul.

God is pressing knowledge to you – please don't get in your own way. Step aside from your attitudes and your emotions and let the unlimited thoughts come to you ~ Gary.
