

New house by Gary Bate

Being a conscious creator is always preferable (and empowering) to the opposite of that, which is the tirade of emotions that come from those who play the victim.

The shift to conscious creator isn't easy because of the time it takes between the creative thought of an ideal and the manifestation of it.

In scattered thinking we are constantly bouncing around old neighbourhoods in our neuronets and thus our days reveal no new creativity.

The conscious creator creates a 'new neighbourhood' by his or her design. Personal ideals become the lofty precipice from where all of one's thinking comes from.

The new neighbourhood are created in exactly the same way as you have laid down your existing neighbourhoods – by 'association & repetition'. What do you think of when I ask you to think of the colour red? There's an example of your 'hard-wiring'.

So we hard-wire a new neighbourhood and we stay in it until it manifests. All contrary thinking and doubts are coming from old neighbourhoods...

As 'all times exist now', we 'associate & repeat' in the present (the now). We are putting up the walls of our new house and we just have to keep returning to it. A lofty house on a lofty precipice with the best views...

Now remember you'll have many old neighbourhoods tucked away in your subconscious, ready to pounce and challenge your new design. You have to silence the voices of the senate.

So let's make a start shall we? On the basis that 'we don't have anything without our health' let's see how the following statements (walls of the new house) sit:

I want to extend my life - “ I cancel all destinies that lead to the conclusion of my life”

I never want to be disabled - “ I am able-bodied and I have always been able-bodied”

Hopefully you will now add to this list and build your new house. The construct must be in the now tense because all times exist now.

The reason for the 'lack of manifestaton' is because of 2 things – the predominance of opposing thoughts coming from old neighbourhoods and the very long time it takes assists all doubts...

Manifestation can only come in accordance with your lowest point of consciousness and in the time-flow of that. For instance, if you're an emotional wreck and your focusing on fabulous wealth, then you might get an inheritance payment sometime in your future. If your a tyrant or a victim (same level of consciousness) then whatever you're trying to manifest will only come in that slow time and by way of having control over other people. If you're simply operating mass to mass then your operating in the slowest time and you're always going to have to work very hard for it. Get it?

So how can we speed things up and move closer to instant manifestation? We 'speed up' by raising our lowest point of consciousness. Love is always the answer ~ Gary Bate.
