

Nobody by Gary Bate

I see how people delight in being a 'somebody', in being recognised, in being accepted, in being famous, in being popular etc. and that's not my chosen destiny.

Being a popular 'image' is delightful for the attention it brings one. But that is image-consciousness and it is the path of temporary power followed by certain death.

God is a nobody, so to say “the Father and I are One” is saying “ I am a divine nobody (a Spirit).

The trajectory of the image-conscious World and those who play that game, is unconscious death.

In my article entitled The Elephant, I talked about chiseling away at the hardened encrustations that have hidden our divine cores. We are not the image and its many layers; we are the imageless.

When you get on the Spiritual path and you start chiseling away, you will gradually ditch all of your false identities that have been useful to you in this World. Becoming a nobody is disconcerting to say the least, but don't long for the loss of your hardened shell; rejoice in your emerging divinity.

Everyone who craves any aspect of this World is a lost Soul. You can crave success, money, fame, sex, drugs, popularity, acceptance, recognition, power, control; indeed, any or all of these temporary 'images' will ultimately bring you down. Take the badges off and throw them away..

There are two paths – there's the body-conscious image path and there's the Spiritual imageless one.

It's never too late to change paths.. ~ Gary Bate of whatstress dot com
